Tissue engineering is the use of a combination of cells, engineering and materials methods, and suitable biochemical and physicochemical factors to improve or replace biological tissues. Tissue engineering involves the use of a tissue scaffold for the formation of new viable tissue for a medical purpose. While it was once categorized as a sub-field of biomaterials, having grown in scope and ...

An important feature for the use of a material in a biomedical application is its degradation and cytotoxic behavior. Laponite® has been shown to degrade, particularly under acidic conditions, resulting in the release of degradation products such as aqueous silica (Si(OH)₄), sodium, magnesium and lithium ions into the medium. 15 More recently, the vulnerability of Laponite® to chemical ...
