The one hour run is an athletics event in which competitors try to cover as much distance as possible within one hour. While officially recognized by the International Association of Athletics Federations as a track event, it is rarely contested apart from occasional world record attempts.. The event has a long history, with first recorded races dating back to the late 17th century.

If your exercise program has left you dissatisfied with your results, here's the program for you. Most people exercise very inefficiently, spending many hours weekly, sometimes even hours daily, trying to get in shape. And their results are poor. In fact, it's no exaggeration to say that most people get next to zero results from their exercise programs.
